

Current flows

autism, creativity and learning

8th September 2021

Credits: right - Katherine May; background - "zones of flow (iii)" Rocio von Jungenfeld

Current flows

autism, creativity and learning

Join us for an early evening event with a difference, exploring autistic experiences through a stimulating and exciting programme. Enjoy an exhibition of diverse creativity and latest thinking about autism!

The evening begins with the screening of the short animation film "I Feel Different" (12A, Playing A/Part and the BBC), kicking off a lively discussion between experts and audience about "Futures for Autistic Girls: diagnosis, education and beyond." After sampling some food / refreshments (included with the ticket) you will be treated to a reading from our local and internationally acclaimed author Katherine May whose memoir of late-diagnosis, "The Electricity of Every Living Thing" will be set amidst "zones of flow (iii)," a stunning light installation from Rocio von Jungenfeld.

Top all this with an opportunity to see the exhibition WOW (Welcome to our World) in the afternoon (open from 15:00). This event is a must for all parents, teachers and individuals with an interest in autism.

- 15.00-16.30 (pre-event) exhibition (Jarman Studio 3)
- 16.30-16.45 short animation screening (Gulbenkian Cinema)
- 16.45-17.45 panel / roundtable (Gulbenkian Cinema)
- 17.45-18.30 food / refreshments (Colyer-Fergusson foyer)
- 18.30-19.15 reading & light installation (Colyer-Fergusson)

A black circular icon containing the white text "12A", indicating the film's age rating.

This event is presented in association with ICCI. Book via the Gulbenkian or contact Playing A/Part. More info at <https://playingapartautisticgirls.org>